PREFACE.

THE Chants in this Collection have been arranged with the following main principles in view:—

1. That single or double Chants should be used according to the character and construction of each Psalm.

See Psalms xv. (single); xxiv. (double).

2. That the construction of each Psalm should as far as possible govern the antiphonal arrangement:—e.g., if the parallel or antithesis occurs between the two halves of one verse, each half should be assigned to Cantoris and Decani respectively.

See Psalms xv., xix., l., xc.

3. That the variations of subject or sentiment in each Psalm should be marked by a change of Chant.

See Psalms xviii., lxxviii.

Should there be any difficulty in following the antiphonal marks (Dec. and Can.) as they stand, they can be simplified under the direction of the Choirmaster without injury to the general arrangement of the Chants.

The Chants have been numbered consecutively, not only for the purpose of reference, but also in order that selections from them may be made for the Canticles, or, when required, for Special Services.

The thanks of the Editors are due to those professional and amateur musicians who have contributed original compositions to this work; also to those who have granted permission for the insertion of such Chants as have appeared before, or of which they hold the copyright. The Editors likewise offer their apologies for any infringement of copyright of which they may have been unintentionally guilty.
